XRP Is The Fastest Way To Send Bitcoin. There is Proof

The Bitcoin blockchain is very inefficient and is cost hefty when the network sees influxes in activity. Recently when Bitcoin surged to almost $14,000 the transaction fee reached a peak of $6 per transaction. I mean PayPal is usually cheaper to use than that. Not to mention the hours of wait time you will be experiencing with that expensive transaction fee. When Bitcoin peaked around $20,000 in 2017 the transaction fee was literally $40 and transaction time was about a day. I actually used Bitcoin during this time to make a purchase of a keyboard on amazon and had to pay that monstrous fee.

However you can actually use any asset on the XRP Ledger such as Bitcoin and you can indeed move Bitcoin through the XRP Ledger.

Take a look at this video from the 1:45 Mark and watch it for about a minute and you will see Ripple co-founder Chris Larsen sending Bitcoin instantly at no cost using the XRP Ledger.

2013 OpenCoin Now Known as Ripple with Chris Larsen

Quite simply amazing how interoperable, instant, and efficient the XRP Ledger is, even when its not the native asset XRP. I would really like to see this trending in the Bitcoin community, because then if Bitcoiners have an alternative path that is cheaper it will create competitiveness among the miners and cause them to lower their fees. Also Bitcoiners would experience the benefits of the XRPL first hand. When Bitcoin can't handle its transactions the XRPL can handle them.
